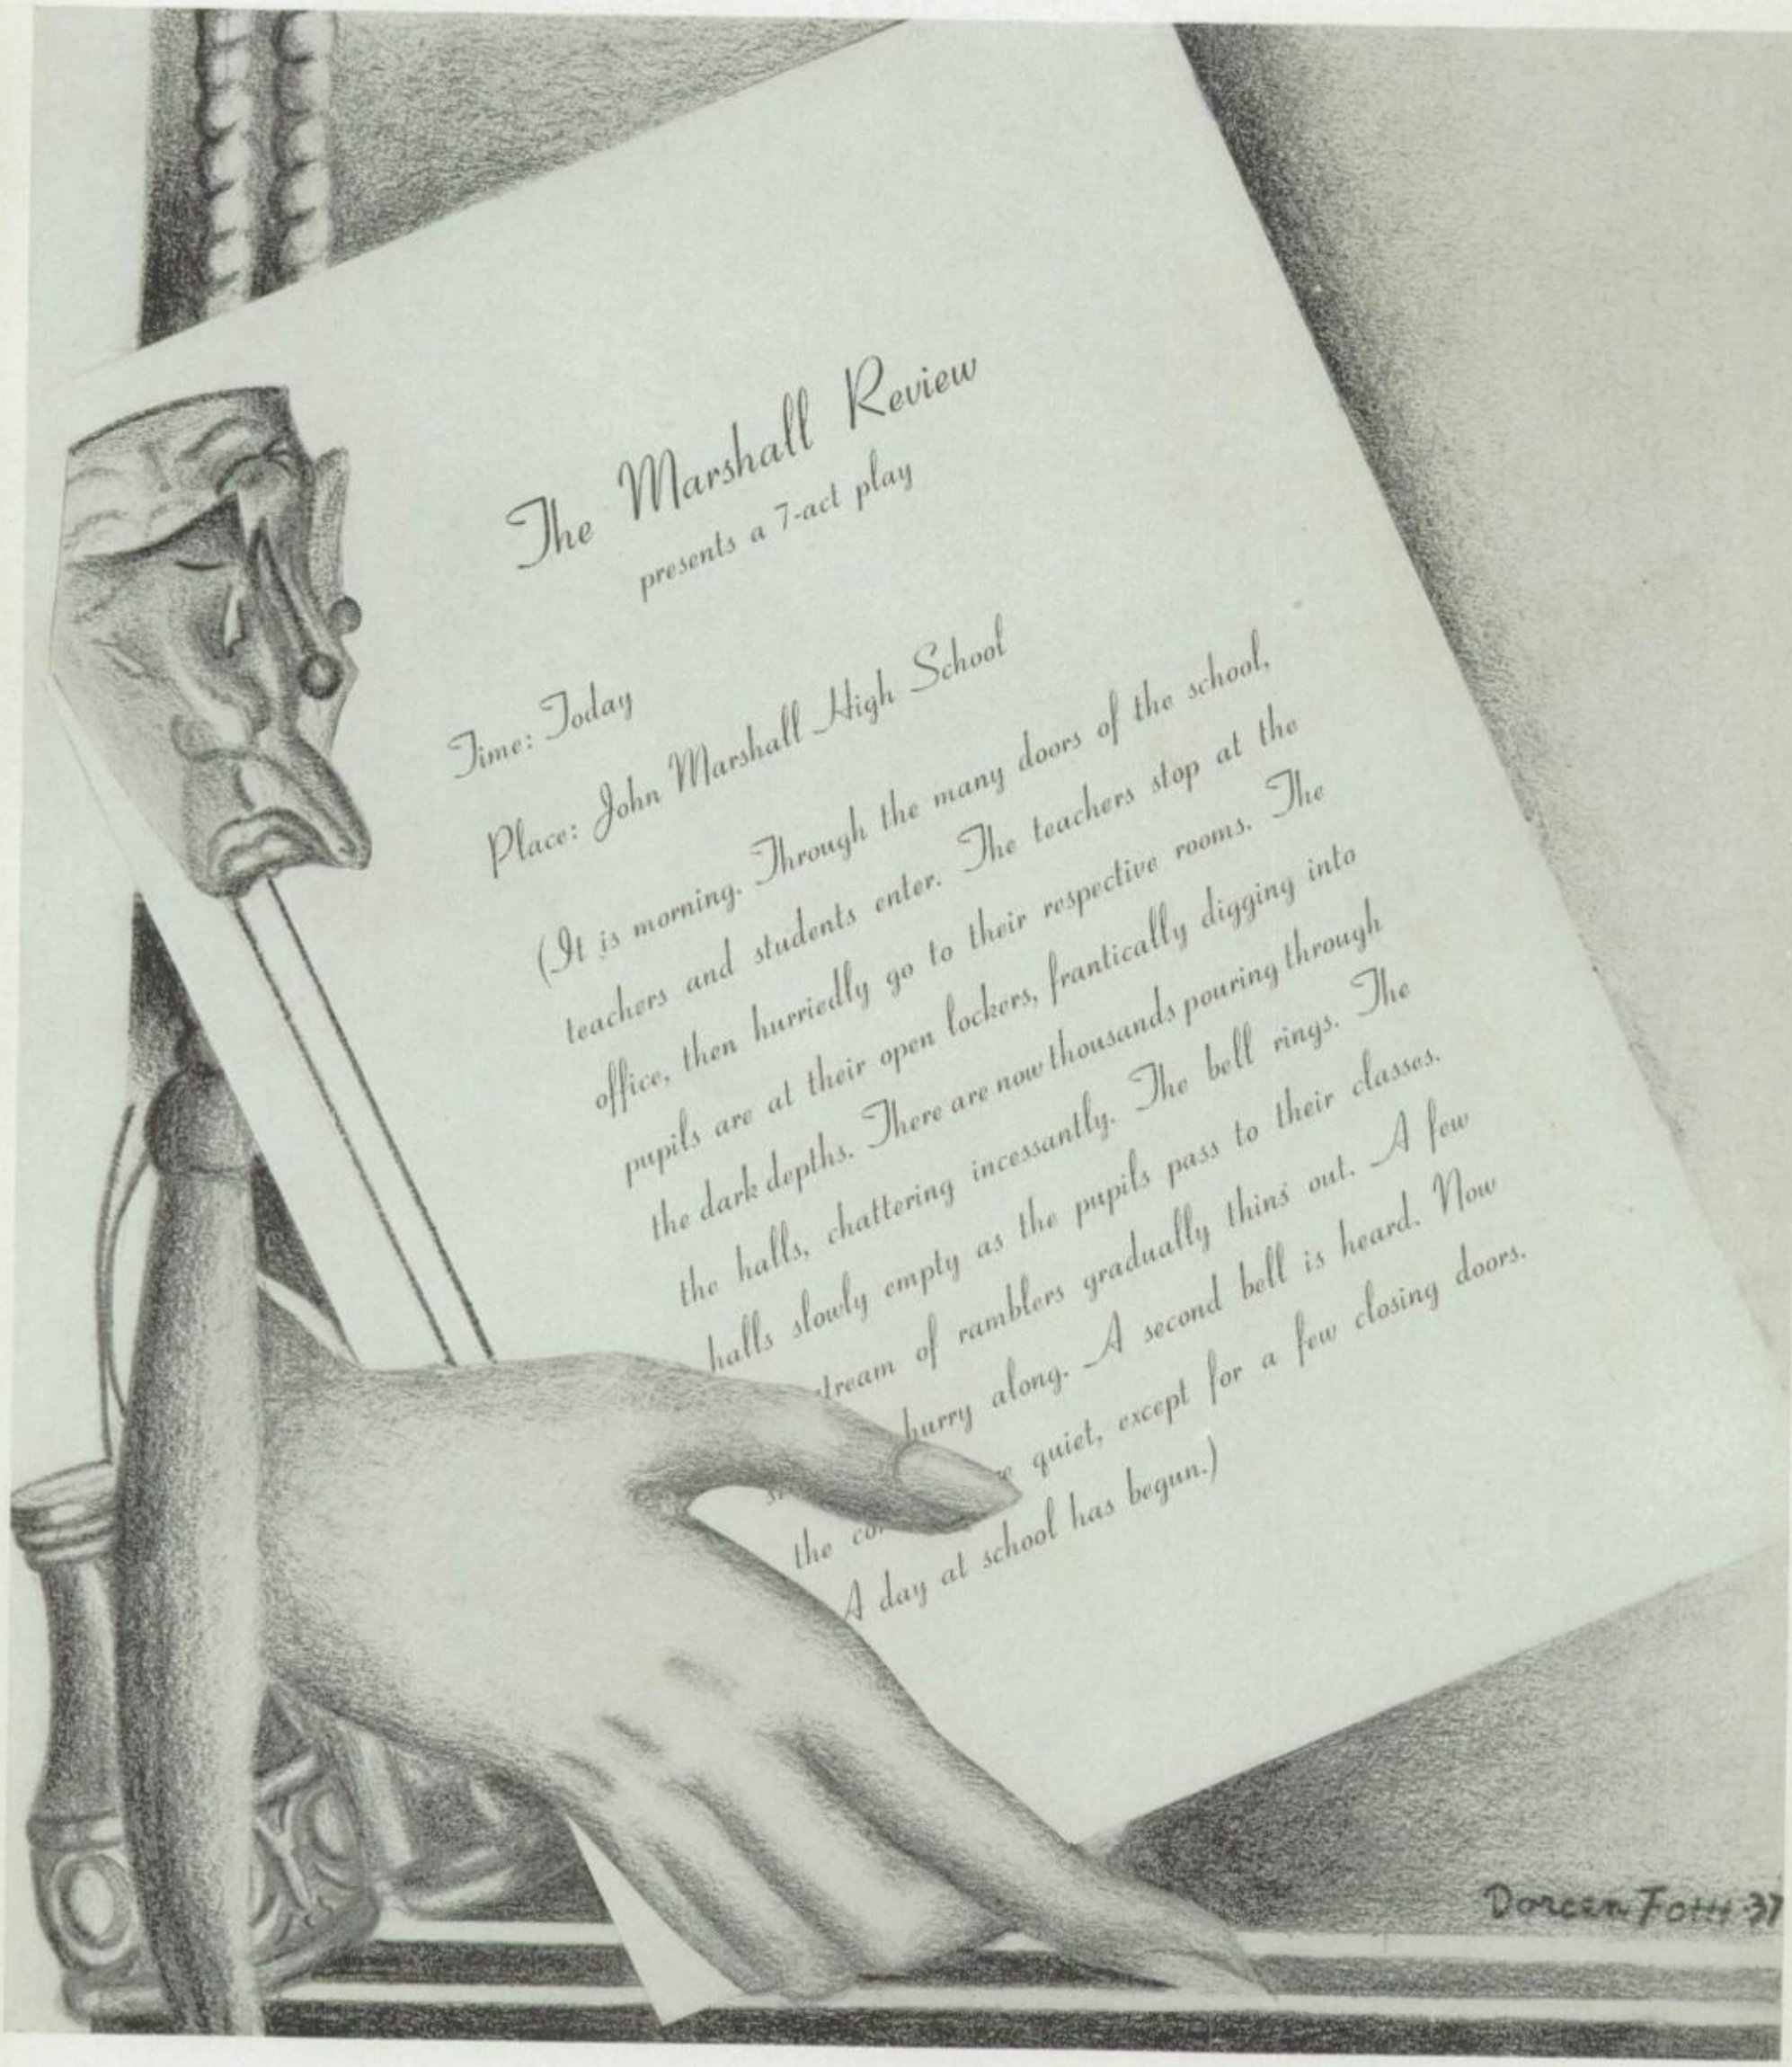
The Curtain Rises:—
The Play Begins



The Marshall Review
presents a 7-act play
Time: Today
Place: John Marshall High School
(It is morning. Through the many doors of the school, teachers and students enter. The teachers stop at the office, then hurriedly go to their respective rooms. The pupils are at their open lockers, frantically digging into the dark depths. There are now thousands pouring through the halls, chattering incessantly. The bell rings. The halls slowly empty as the pupils pass to their classes.
dream of ramblers gradually thins out. A few hurry along. A second bell is heard. Now quiet, except for a few closing doors.
A day at school has begun.)

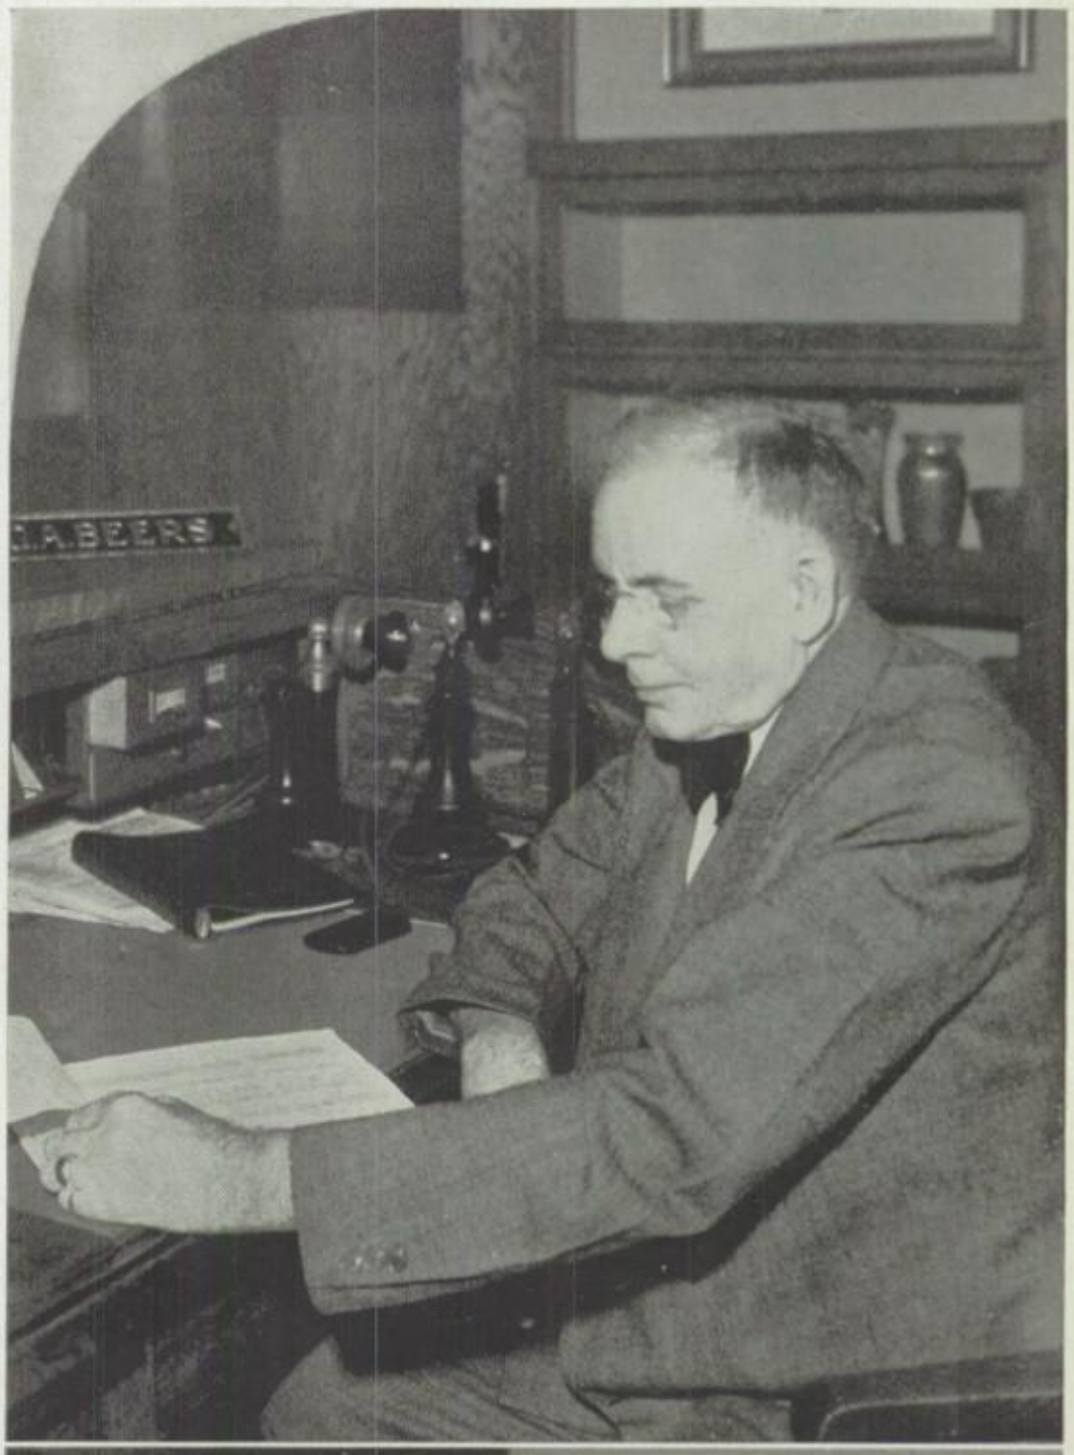
THE THEATER

THE DIRECTORS

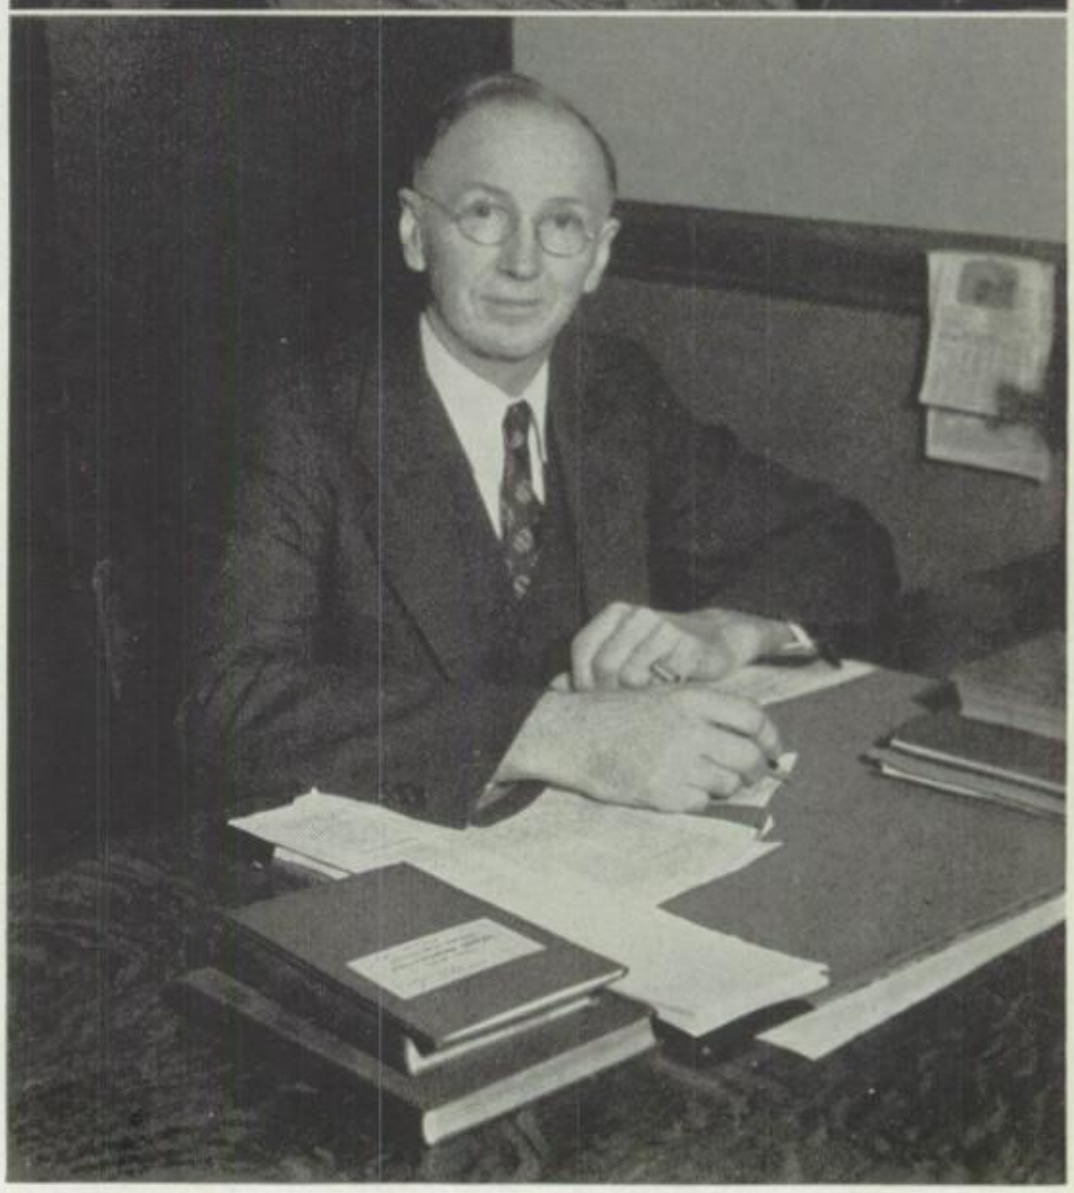


To Miss Ethelwyn Charles:

What reveals the power of Nature? The tornado, the flood, the earthquake? No! These are merely Nature maladjusted. Rather the quiet shift from darkness to daylight, the regular swell and ebb of the tides, the ceaseless carving of the surface of the earth. These speak of the profound potency of Nature in perfect adjustment.

During the twelve years of my principalship Miss Charles, you have moved among us with all the quiet dignity that bespeaks perfect adjustment and deep seated power. Keen, alert, sound in your judgment of personalities and trends and withal a genuine and true friend.

G. A. BEERS.



R. A. White

It has been heretofore the custom for one generation to dictate to the next generation how it shall act. It has usually offered itself as a model. When we consider what kind of a world we have bequeathed to you, we can not very well say, "Follow in our footsteps." We are at the cross-roads, and we do not know which way to direct you. About all we can say is, "Be the master of your own fate." Never before has any generation of youth faced so great a responsibility or been given a greater opportunity to show its worth. We often hear it said that responsibility makes or breaks one. I have enough confidence in this generation to say, "Take this old world and make it respectable again. I believe you can do it."

R. A. WHITE.

Mary Amtman has the ability to transmit her wide knowledge of acting and directing to her students. She recruited many pupils in her first year at Marshall, pupils who were interested in learning the rudiments of good acting. Since that first year in 1916, dramatics has played an important role in the school life at Marshall. Receiving their preliminary training from Miss Amtman, many of the students have earned parts in radio and theater performances in Chicago and other cities.

OUTSTANDING DRAMATIC PRODUCTIONS

In June 1926, the popular light opera, "Mikado," was presented under the joint direction of Miss Amtman and Miss Wines. The success of this operetta on its first performance, resulted in two additional presentations of it.

The highlight of the season of Sept.-Dec. 1930, was the comedy "Poor Nut" presented at the J. P. I. by Marshall's dramatic group.

"R. U. R." was given in January 1935 and again laurels went to the Dramatic Club for superb entertainment.

Then January 1938, and "Dulcy," a comedy was enacted, climaxing 21 bright years of dramatic presentations at Marshall, under Miss Amtman's able direction.

REVIEW—THE PLAYWRIGHTS

The write way

It is the aim of the REVIEW staff to recapture a semester of school life and preserve it in an interesting and entertaining semi-annual. With this objective in mind, the members have worked zealously all semester, building up subscriptions, taking clubs and classes pictures, writing copy for clubs, sports and senior writeups, and doing numerous other jobs necessary to get the REVIEW out on time. Our work is done—the book is finished—we hope you will like it!

increase of more than 100 subscribers. "One dollar for both the REVIEW and NEWS" was the battle cry, and loud and strong it rang. The result of a job well done was the weekly distribution of the NEWS and now its climax is the placing of the REVIEW in your hands.

SECTION EDITORS—OUR CASHIERS

Section editors strive to obtain 100% subscribers to the Marshall NEWS and REVIEW. Capable students are chosen for this work, for it necessitates the handling of large sums of money, and the keeping of accurate accounts. These aggressive workers do not mind giving their time to the collection of the subscription fees. In many cases they are early in reaching their quota.

ART CLUB—DESIGNERS

Twelve-hundred dollars in scholarships was awarded in a single semester to the members of our Art Club. How's that for art? Mr. Weisenberg, instructor, a fine painter in his own right, has the ability to stimulate in his students an imaginative insight that is rare in high school work. Projects of this organization that have received wide recognition are the mural panels done by students especially interested in this type of artist's expression.

BOY'S GLEE CLUB—MALE CHORUS

BROTHERHOOD IN SONG! that's the Marshall Boys' Glee Club with Miss Mary A. Ballard, the lady behind the pitch-pipe! The main event of the semester was their participating in the City High School Choral Contest. Their activities include giving assembly programs, presenting entertainment at neighboring schools, honoring their mothers at semi-annual parties and gathering at annual Get-Together Banquets sponsored by the Alumni Society of the Glee Club. That means . . . fun for one and fun for all!

GERMAN CLUB—FOREIGN PRESENTATION

"Ich offene die deutsche Kreis." An intriguing meeting of the German Club begins. In an atmosphere that stimulates interest in German activity. Students, from each semester, learn of current German life and literature. Not from dull text books, but through the medium of singing and presenting plays. A touch of gaiety is thus achieved.

FRENCH CLUB—TRANSLATORS

"Bonjour mesdames et messieurs." Clay figures, a miniature stage, operatic arias, and a short ballet illustrate the French Club's version of Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel." Madame Wahl, through these visual means, interprets the great literature of the nation to the students, and the members feel that they have been residents of France all of their lives. HEBREW CLUB—TRANSLATORS

A Chanukah Festival! . . . December 2, 1937. On this joyous occasion, the Hebrew Club, recently affiliated with the J. Y. L., played host to all students interested in Hebrew language and culture. All who attended the festival were inspired by the speech of Mr. Ben Aronin, and the spirited Hebrew folk-dances and songs. Meetings of this sort do much to publicize this society and to instill in the pupils the desire to learn the Hebrew language.

PAN-AMERICAN LEAGUE—EXPOUNDERS

The Marshall Pan-American League was formed last semester as an outgrowth of the former Spanish Club.

Having two sponsors, the league's membership this term has been increased to four times its original number.

The Pan-American League is an international organization extending throughout the twenty-one Spanish speaking nations in North and South America. Its purpose is to promote peace and good-will among its member nations.

LAW CLUB—CONTRACTS

"His honor, the judge! Everybody please rise." In room 211, among thick law books and important documents, the Law Club convenes every Friday. Assisted by Mr. Hansen, the club members take part in civic projects, discuss improvements for the school, and furnish lawyers for the student court. "Business finished. Court adjourned."

SECRETARIAL CLUB—BUSINESS ASSISTANTS

Experience is the foundation for success and that's just what the pupils are getting in the Secretarial Club. Deftness and adaptability are taught by showing them at first hand what business is all about. In the course of a semester the class visits various business firms where they observe such things as mimeographing, stenciling, and other office technique.

RED CROSS CLUB—BENEFIT PERFORMERS!

Join Now!

That is the slogan of the Red Cross Club. A group of its members are seen working on a scrapbook to be sent to Greece. Others make gloom-chasers for war veterans, while still others campaign for contributions to give to the needy. Because of this organization's unselfish aims, many unfortunates have been aided. We salute its members!

EMERGENCY SQUAD—JUST IN CASE!

The emergency squad, "Johnnies on the spot," ready with their newly acquired motorcycle, fulfill their duties of protecting school property. They, the police of Marshall, keep order and enforce the laws of our student court.

Their morale has been kept up through the special interests of Mr. White and the helpful cooperation of the members of the squad. Hats off to these protectors of public property!

MARSHALL SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA—THE OVERTURE

Marshall Symphony Orchestra, under the efficient direction of Mr. Merle Isaac, and Mr. Ralph Lewis, followed up its scintillating success at the National Contest held last spring with another triumph—its annual concert which took place December 1.

The orchestra gave excellent interpretations of Mozart's "G Minor Symphony," and of Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite." The outstanding feature on the program was Eddy Epstein's superb rendition of Grieg's "Piano Concerto."

INTERMEDIATE ORCHESTRA—UNDERSTUDIES

The success of the SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA lies in the preliminary training received by the group. The INTERMEDIATE ORCHESTRA of today is being prepared to fill the empty chairs left by graduating seniors of the advanced orchestra. This group, with whom Mr. Lewis spends much of his time, is trained so as to be able to carry on the tradition of the orchestra. That tradition says that Marshall's Symphony Orchestra must continue to rank FIRST in competitive orchestral contests!

VIOLINS: Azriel, S. Bendsen, Hart, Horwitz, Kleinerman, Krasny, Lang, Lowenthal, Mitchell, Psencika, Rohrer, Rothblatt, Singer, Weiner, Ziblat, Cohen, Fishbain, Sherman, Douch, Goodman. INTERMEDIATE BAND—IN RESERVE

The Intermediate Band bridges the gap between the advanced and beginning bands. Their desire is to find places for themselves in the Symphonic band or orchestra. It is in such an organization that the champion musicians of tomorrow receive much of their important musical knowledge.

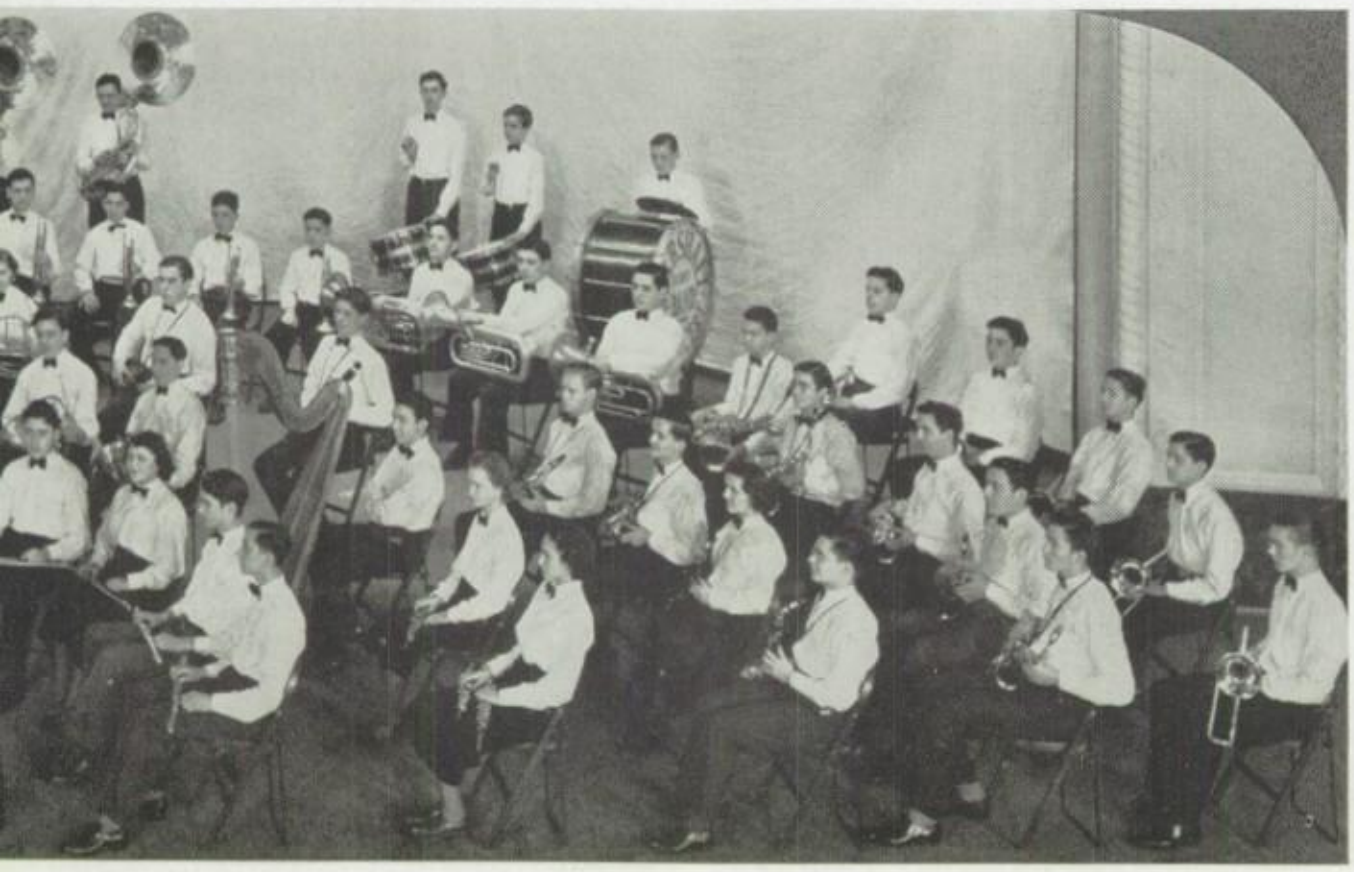
MARSHALL CONCERT BAND—FINALE

Under the able leadership of their inspiring director, Mr. Clifford Lillya, the Marshall Concert Band is rapidly gaining recognition. The group, determined to bring honors to the school, is working hard to better its musicianship and increase its instrumentation.

The annual fall concert given by the band on December 1 was received with a tremendous ovation. Its program included "Blue Bells," by Buchtel, Christianson's "Second Norwegian Rhapsody," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," by Alford, and "Mood Mauve," by Howland.



SAXOPHONES: Parker, Markman, Simon, Birnbaum, White. FRENCH HORNS: Epstein, Wechsler, Elkin, Stein, Raff, Noonan, Saunders, Salvi. EUPHONIUMS: Goldman, Kaplan, Segal. LIBRARY—SCRIPTS

For the 4,500 students at Marshall, there are 11,000 books in the library. This allows 2 books to each pupil. With an average of 350 pages in each book, each student has 700 pages to read. Since one student reads an average of 20 pages a night, there are only 90,000 pages read; which makes 256 books read a night. Therefore, there are 10,744 books that are not read each night in the Marshall Library.

Each of the 72 assistants is sole guardian of 153 books. This is an amazing number of books for one student to handle, but they do it with the efficiency of professional librarians.

Boots! Boots! Boots! Boots! Once again a group of young men passes on parade, marching along in true militaristic style for the honor of Marshall. Sergeant Zahrn, the man behind the gun, and the recruits of '37 have reaped over one hundred bars, medals, and trophies in city wide contests.

Marshall-Austin Struggle Promises To Be Toughest Tilt on Oriole's Schedule

FIRST ROW: Rhode, Navigato, Green, D. Cohen, Sostrin, Morros, Stanley, J. Balkcom, Helford. SECOND ROW: Mr. Willis, Potkin, Lefeber, Albano, Rotfeld, Crisorio, Star, B. MARSHALL-McKINLEY—POWERHOUSE

Look to your laurels, Ohio! Crissorio passed to Kossich, who carried the "leather bag" for a short distance. He in turn, when about to be tackled, lateraled it to Rotfeld, who eluded several would-be tacklers and scored up-right! Coming along slowly, Marshall's offensive power displayed itself finally in a brilliant burst of running and "swell" blocking. A charging line led by the co-captains for the season, Sostrin and Cohen, showed that spark that differentiates champions from mediocre players.

And incidentally . . . Marshall 26—McKinley 0.

AUSTIN-MARSHALL—SWISH!—ANOTHER KICKOFF!!

Looking like a point-a-minute Michigan U. aggregation, but acting more malicious (from our point of view), the Austin stalwarts reached one of the highest scores yet registered against an Oriole team . . . sixty-one points. Forty-three points were scored by that phenomenon of the Public School League, DeCorrevont. Marshall scored! Yes, she did . . . six points as the direct result of a "Statue of Liberty" play. Our team shows promise of different results in their next encounter with Austin.

CRANE-MARSHALL—PLEASE, LIGHTS OUT

For the first time in its history, a Marshall team played under the lights in this city, and they regretted it.

Although admittedly up against a superior foe, the Orioles made the Red and Blue Boys pull out their very last tricks to gain every inch of ground.

The final score: Crane 19—Marshall 10.

One of the largest Marshall crowds yet seen showed up at the gridiron. While quite inexperienced at rooting we did a fair job,—thus showing that this old school fosters some pride and spirit for her men of muscle.

BOY'S FENCING— GRACEFUL, EH, WHAT?

"En garde!" Four-score boys spring to position . . . "Salute . . . thrust . . . parry!" Rapidly these various fencing postures are assumed by the junior and senior gym classes. Weekly, under Director Ruzicka's guidance, these boys are given training for co-ordination of mind and muscle. Only the initial steps are being taught this semester. Some students, eager to advance and enthusiastic over this exhilarating sport, purchase their own foils and fence among themselves. Next year's senior classes will be taught the actual engagement and will perhaps bring their efforts to a climax in the formation of a school team.

BOYS' SWIMMING—BIG SPLASH

One class that no one has ever regretted taking is swimming. Who can ever forget the spluttering and splashing of our first strokes and the sad realization that only fish can breathe under water? Remember Mr. Ruyter and Mr. Wills making us lie on the cold tile side of the pool and kick our legs for three minutes? "Keep your knees stiff — ankles loose!" Puff, puff, and those lengthy 180 seconds came to an end. All kidding aside, show us a boy unappreciative of the swimming class. Beginners completed their course with good fundamental knowledge enabling them to enjoy "Neptune's Kingdom." Advanced boys had no kick coming when they saw the results of improved diving technique and stroking. Maybe we didn't leave as Johnny Weissmullers, but the joys of the "ole swimmin' hole" were opened to us threefold.

GYM GEMS

The name itself, "Gym Gems," does not indicate merely that the girl is a good athlete but marks her as a "star" in the gym department. She is a girl with a keen sense of humor and good sportsmanship, and is liked by everyone because she can "take it on the chin."

The "Gem" must know the fundamentals of each game and take part in almost every activity in the gym department. She must learn to play for the team and not as an individual. Above all, she must be able to accept defeat as well as victory!

THE TRIAL OF THE CENTURY

(In one act and one scene)

By Ira Miller

Dedicated to my comrades, the leaders of the generation, in the hope that they will take the lead in fostering better understanding between men of all races, colors, creeds, and classes.

Time: The Present.

Place: Anywhere.

CHARACTERS

Prosecuting Attorney.....Reason
Defendants.....Persecution and Oppression
Judge .....Understanding
Jury.....You, the Youth of Today

(The Trial has continued for many weeks, and at last the Prosecuting Attorney rises to make his final plea to the jury.)

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY: Ladies and Gentlemen of the jury: The defendants are accused of fostering misunderstanding among nations and men. Their fate lies in your hands.

Today the world is filled with hatred and hostility. One country persecutes and oppresses minority groups. Other countries foment war. At no other time has venom been spat with such intensity by the men and the nations of the world. Never have antagonism and fanaticism, begotten by error and misunderstanding, been so prevalent. Here on earth, where peace and goodwill were intended to have ascendancy, we are being pulled down by Persecution and Oppression into the chaos of a medieval world.

And so Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury, I ask you to return a verdict of guilty. The prosecution rests.

JUDGE (to the jury): You have heard the evidence presented. You will now retire to the jury room and render your verdict.

(Jury deliberates but five minutes and returns to the courtroom.)

JUDGE: Have you reached a verdict?

JURY: We have, your honor.

JUDGE: The defendants will rise and face the jury. (To the jury) What is your verdict?

JURY: We, the jury, find the defendants, Persecution and Oppression, guilty of fostering misunderstanding among nations and men.

JUDGE (to the defendants): It becomes my duty to sentence both of you to be wiped off the face of the earth forever. (To the jury and the court) But remember, we cannot condemn them to death. It is the duty of the people of the world, and particularly of the next generation, to live and to help others to live in fraternal concord and harmonious union, man with man, nation with nation. "Deed not Creed" should be our watchword, stamped upon our hearts with the flaming letters of universal brotherhood. That is the only way to rid ourselves of these notorious public enemies. Court is adjourned.

THE DRAMA OF LIFE

ACT II. AT MARSHALL

By

Jeanne Cohen

The World is a stage . . . Life, a play . . . and our high school days just one act of that never-ending drama, The Drama of Life. The stage is set, and as the curtain goes up on the first scene, we find ourselves in the hall of the John Marshall High School. Our actors and actresses enter in groups, all heavily laden with books, going from class to class feeling quite big . . . only to be reminded in short time that they are "freshies." But the humility of being a "freshie" was overcome by pride for Marshall after witnessing "R. U. R.," cheering for the success of football and basketball teams, and applauding loudly for the music of the Orchestra and the Glee Clubs. It isn't all fun, though, this first year. Oh, the hours spent on Latin . . . physiology . . . algebra . . . can they ever be forgotten?

And on this the curtain falls. It is down only for a few moments, however, and when it rises, we find that the setting hasn't changed, but quickly we notice that our players have. Where once they stood with books piled high on top of books, they now stand with only one book under each arm . . . where once they listened to the taunting jeer "freshie," they now stand using that same taunting tone to tease other "freshies." But they haven't changed in their feeling of pride for Marshall. How could they . . . after cheering the basketball team on to becoming West Section "champs" . . . after seeing the Orioles win second place . . . and above all, after being thrilled with the remarkable presentation of "Berkeley Square" by the Drama Club. Yes, as "sophs," they play the scene well, but they are glad when the curtain drops and they find themselves after it has lifted, not only Juniors, but UPPER CLASSMEN.

Juniors now, carrying only one book . . . discussing the "Weavers," humming tunes from "Blow Me Down," the Boys' Glee Club operetta, and "Romance of Cashmere," staged by the Girls' Treble Clef Choir, showing their talents at the News-Review Amateur Show, listening to the gay songs of Spain at the Spanish "Fiesta," hearing of the horrors of war at the first PEACE ASSEMBLY, mourning the death of Superintendent Bogan . . . but, in the midst of all this activity, the curtain softly comes down.

Despite interruptions, activity does not cease . . . it is continued from one scene to the next, and this next scene is the last. With the increase of activity, we find a decrease of study. The Orchestra wins National honors at Columbus; "O, Doctor" and "The Wild Rose" add still more glory to our Glee Clubs; the Drama Club proves its versatility by giving "Death Takes a Holiday" and "Dulcy" during the same year; athletic teams still fight to bring honors back to Marshall. For the first time a Senior Bank is introduced for Marshall graduating Seniors; new and improved Student Court plans are adopted; the Orchestra and Band present a joint concert; festive dances are planned for the Senior Class; the Review sponsors a Theater Party to see Eugene O'Neill's "The Straw" at the Blackstone Theatre; a second PEACE ASSEMBLY is prepared and presented by Marshall's Peace Council; and all this, climaxed by the PROM, the "grand Finale," brings the curtain down on a splendidly presented act.

Once more the curtain is rung up. It is Graduation Night . . . the players appear for their final "curtain call." Midst thunderous applause, the curtain has come down on this act, and when next it comes up, our actors and actresses will no longer be high school "boys and girls." And to Marshall, the setting for this act in the Drama of Life . . . the Marshall which has prepared them to attain honor for themselves and their generation, they will ever be loyal.

THE WORLD IS MINE

By Joyce Wilson

(Winning Essay—Upper Class)

Every beautiful thing that I have ever read, heard, seen, or felt, I have claimed for my own and dissolved into memories. These mental possessions have many advantages over possessions of a corporeal nature. They don't burn, decay, or evaporate. They can't be stolen, and, above all, there is always room for more. A great number of my possessions have not only beauty in them, but they have a touch of the pathetic, humorous, or incongruous,

"And oft when on my couch I lie
In vacant or in pensive mood,
They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude."

One of my "memory possessions" is a country scene in Indiana. Being very fond of poetry and also delighting in the fresh fragrance of the outdoors, I had ample opportunity to combine them by climbing high in a great oak tree, and, in a seat made by nature, read my favorite book of poems. It would be only a few minutes, however, when I, leaning contentedly against the trunk of the friendly tree to meditate upon "The Vision of Sir Launfal" and finding myself distracted by the subtle sounds of the fields and woods, would let my wandering mind contemplate the peaceful scene spread around me.

Directly to my right lay the farm buildings. The white of the little cottage and the red of the barn made a pretty contrast with the green of the surrounding trees and neighboring cornfield. At length my gaze wandered to the meadow in front of me. A cow, lazily chewing her cud, lay under one of the few trees which seemed to be there only for her enjoyment.

One of these same trees in the very center of the field had been the cause of a slight though exciting incident. My girl friend and I, bent upon determining who could climb the highest, chose this tree as the object of our conquests. I won, but, oh, the price of victory! Coming down, I suddenly felt nothing but air under my feet, and, as my arms were too short to encircle the trunk of the huge tree, I became too frightened to do anything but hang there in mid-air. I slipped, just a little, still retaining my hold, but the emptiness remained. Finally I could hold on no longer. The strain on my arms was too much, and I was beginning to feel dizzy. I let go. Instead of a drop of several feet as I had feared, it was only a few inches to the next limb, from which it was quite easy to descend to the ground.

Across the road on my left, a hill cut off all but the chimney of Mr. DeBrown's big stone house and garage. To complete the picture, the late afternoon sun cast an ever-deepening rose glow over it all.

Beauty has to be studied in order to be appreciated, and the mind has to be in harmony with its surroundings to be quick enough to catch the bits of loveliness that play hide-and-seek on the disappointing streets of life. Little unusual is seen in a row of houses at first glance, but, if the day is clear, one may watch the sparkling reflections of the sun glance and dart from window to window as if to laugh, "Catch me if you can!" A dark cloud appears over the sun. It begins to rain. The dull gray buildings are no longer stolid and impassive; they become silver fairy castles of shimmering transparency that may vanish any minute. Alas! They do vanish, yet they disappear only to be transformed into a white dancing vision by snow, like a dream that makes the impossible real, one can watch inside the homes and see the tears drop to form a Gypsy's crystal ball that reflects the laughter of the future.

People are even more interesting than scenery. From the day the boy skins his knee and laughs about it to show what a brave soldier he is, to the time he takes his honorable discharge with stoic calm, the features try to hide the bitter struggles within. But, like the trenches that are dug on the fields of war, these struggles show in deep set lines and wrinkles. Many a face reveals the beauty of peace, but more by far relate the story of strife,

"And I thought how many thousands
Of care encumbered men,
Each with his burden of sorrow
Had passed over the bridge since then."

My "memory possessions" are more than scenes, adventures, or people. They are books, poems, music, and conversations. They are everything. They are my friends, and. as Silas Marner gloried in his gold, I bring out my gold pieces to glory in their beauty whenever I feel I need something to boost my spirits to a happier mood.

RETRIBUTIONS

By Sarah Azlin

(Winning Poem—Upper Class)

Nature, they told me,
Was worth seeing out here,
So I went to see the sun rise,
In the cold morning air.

It looked quite ordinary,
I laughed at that,
But suddenly I stumbled—
And down I sat!

I heard a low chuckle,
I looked and blinked!
Dew on a leaf sparkled,
As Nature winked!

SUNSHINE AND RAIN

By Judah Roshal

(Second Place Poem—Lower Class)

Happiness, the sunshine of our lives,
For which we our whole life strive,
Is often hidden by sorrow, the rain—
And we suffer in darkness, anguish, and pain.
It seems as if for us the sun has set.

But we must not forget
That we too are Nature's own,
That we, too, need the rain to make us grow.
And our life, that has been watered by the rain
Will sparkle like the dew
When from the darkness the sun comes through.

SEASONS

By Albert Minkus

(Winning Poem—Lower Class)

In the spring when the birds begin
Early and late to build and sing
No sweeter music was ever heard
Than the merry note of the building bird.

In the spring when the leaves all start,
And the violet thrills at its glowing heart,
The windflower opens its tinted cup.
The birds mount merrily up and up.

In the summer when the roses smile
Painting the roadside mile on mile
The beauty catches you as you pass;
The violets thicken among the grass.

Little nests run over with song,
Little wings grow restless and strong.
Daisies show from fields afar
Odors float where lilies are.

In the autumn when the sap runs down,
The leaves are tinted with gold and brown.
And in the winter when wild winds blow,
The leaves lie dead in a shroud of snow.

Hi ya Lou -
Well, it's finally here - I can't help but feel a little sentimental and silly. Sentimental because - well - we have been here for four years, and silly
well because this old gym makes me feel fiddy.
Very fondly yours,
Marge

P.S. I - P.S. I love you you"
P.S. II - Don't forget the "Little Brown Bird"
P.S. III - Don't work too hard - heh heh

Dear Lois,
I do wish every maiden of luck anyone could possibly have.

Dear Lois.
We had a lot of fun together
in the gym. Eh?!!
+ Here wishing you a swell
athletic success
Frances.

Dear Lois:
The day has come at last. All sorts of feelings come with it. Some are glad, others sad because of the friends that are parting. Well that is life. You make friends and then you have to part from them.
Here's wishing you
the best. Loads
